Fund manager commentary

May started with more market fluctuations following takeover of First Republic Bank, which was facing insolvency, by JP Morgan. The stock market trends in both Europe and the USA were positive, however, throughout the month. Initially credit spreads rose a little, especially in the USA, but then fell again. The yield curve was lifted by a repeated lessening of turbulence in the banking sector and continuing high inflation figures. As a result corporate bonds lost a little in value over the month, especially in the USA. Convertible bond performance was extremely positive, as their underlying dynamic universe benefited disproportionately from positive stock market performance. Real estate sector performance was much more modest though. There were corrections in the sector after Swedish real estate company SBB lost its good credit rating and therefore suspended its dividend payments. Real estate shares lost more than 4% this month in both Europe and the USA. As a result of this performance and last year's cautious real estate sector performance, current real estate fund prices are still well below their book values. The fund delta rose a little to 29%.
