Fund manager commentary

After a positive start, towards the end of the month the stock markets experienced setbacks once again triggered by political factors. After a brief moment of relaxation, the US's refusal to attend the North Korean summit and withdrawal from the Iran nuclear deal caused nervousness. The published quarterly results were positive, on the whole, but only briefly revived the market. At the end of the month the problems in forming the Italian government led to significant turbulence on the capital markets. Where corporate matters are concerned, a US hedge fund's attack on Folli Follie is worthy of note. Both stocks and convertible bonds sustained massive losses in value and depressed the portfolio. As a result of regrouping and market fluctuations, the delta fell and is around 45%.
